

National Weather Service Spotter Training Class October 18, 2006

Richard Okulski of the National Weather Service in Memphis teaches a Spotter Training Course, instructing the group of approximately 30 potential weather spotters on the proper methods of identifying dangerous weather as well as the procedure of reporting such phenomena. The class was provided free of charge on Oct. 18 by the Northeast Mississippi Radio Amateurs, the Saltillo Amateur Radio Club, the National Weather Service, Fulton Fire Department and Itawamba County Emergency Management. According to Jeff Clingan of the N.E.M.R.A. club, the large turnout for the event may result in additional classes being offered in the future.
